

STOP THE TRAFFIK Australian Coalition has regularly taken small groups of business representatives to participate in ‘360 Field Trips’ - trips that expose businesses to a 360 view of modern slavery. The trip program explores the cultural, contextual, community and business drivers of bonded and forced labor, exposing the complexity of the issues, how to address them, and opportunities to craft solutions.

For the September 2019 trips, STOP THE TRAFFIK is partnering with ELEVATE to merge on-the-ground lessons with the powerful insights of Asia’s most forward-thinking corporate and supply chain sustainability event, CSR Asia Summit 2019. Prepare for an impactful experience in Thailand, with some of our trip participants also travelling to Cambodia.

Over the course of the first 6 days you will engage with:

- + Workers – such as victims, survivors and worker representative groups
- + Business – such as owners of factories, managers and business associations
- + Local communities through visits that sensitively engage the cultural and historical context
- + NGOs and the media
- + Government and representatives from relevant UN agencies

The structure of our 360 Field Trips builds on STOP THE TRAFFIK’s shared responsibility approach which considers how each group has a role to help end Modern Slavery and each has co-accountability for their responsibilities.

Reflections from previous participants:

“Four generations of my family have been in the ‘rag trade.’ I think I doubled my insight by viewing modern slavery through all these lenses.”

“Despite many ‘field visits’ to our factories over the years, my questions about how and why labour abuse and slavery like practices happened were not answered. Then I was exposed to the contextual drivers first hand and I got it.”

About the organizers:

Fuzz Kitto and Carolyn Kitto are co-Directors of STOP THE TRAFFIK, an Australian based NGO coalition which seeks to end Modern Slavery. They have extensive experience in leading groups of this kind and travelling in Cambodia and Thailand. STOP THE TRAFFIK is one of the groups working closely with the Australian Government on the Modern Slavery Act and resources and supports businesses in its implementation. <http://stopthetraffik.com.au/>
